Home Ec Class Visits Extension Office For Open House

The Home Economics III class from Appomattox County High School and their teachers, Mrs. Cassandra Turner and Mrs. Betty Jo Smith, attended the Open House for Christmas at the Appomattox County Extension Office on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Shirley Walton, Extension Agent, presented to each of the girls a recipe and gift idea booklet and explained how many of the decorations on display were made.

After enjoying refreshments the students returned to the school to continue their classes for the day.

The Christmas Open House at the Extension Office will be open to the public from 10:00 to 4:30 p.m. through Friday of this week.

Several centuries ago people believed that long sharp teeth betrayed a jealous, treacherous nature, that broad front teeth indicated an orderly mind and teeth with spaces between them were considered a sure sign of a lecherous nature.

To Train and Hire Young Dropouts

RICHMOND - Manpower revenue sharing funds of $272,000 have been allocated to the Lynchburg-Danville area to employ school dropouts in a program that will give them work experience and assistance in getting permanent full-time jobs, according to W. Graham Taylor of the Virginia Employment Commission.

Taylor, who coordinates administration of manpower revenue sharing funds for the VEC, explained that the program-Neighborhood Youth Corps-is open to young people 16 through 21 who have dropped out of school and are unable to find employment.

The funds provide for 80 job slots; half in the Lynchburg area, half in the Danville area. Taylor explained, however, that 160 or more individuals may benefit from the program which began in July and will run for 12 months.

"When one participant drops out or moves up to a permanent job, another person may be moved into that slot," he said.

Ideally an individual would stay in a job slot about six months and then would be ready to accept a permanent job, according to Taylor.

Currently 71 of the slots are filled.

Job sites include schools, hospitals and private corporations, participants work as maintenance, custodial and clerical aides and as nurse and psychiatric aides at hospitals. They earn the minimum wage of $1.60 an hour and receive job counseling and assistance in finding permanent jobs. They must have been out of school at least three months and meet income and other criteria. The object of the program is to provide work experience for young people who are unemployed and can't get jobs because they have no experience.

In Danville, the 40 slots are sub-contracted to the local Community Action Program by the VEC. In Lynchburg, transportation and some recruitment and counseling are sub-contracted to the local Community Action Program and the rest is handled by the local VEC office.

Additional information about participation in the program or about hiring participants may be obtained from managers of the two VEC offices: Richard J. Pretty, 734 Main Street, Danville, and Mrs. Kate W. Hamilton, 1912 Memorial Avenue, Lynchburg.

The VEC was designated to administer the program by the local Ancillary Manpower Planning Board.

There are only enough ...ions available to supply ...atients each year, since it requires from 100 to 150 pituitaries to treat just one child for one year. Because HGH can be obtained only from the gland of deceased donors, there is a very limited supply. Eddie receives his supply of HGH at the descretion of the director of the National Pituitary Agency, because of his hypoglycemia, and it must be renewed each year.

According to Dr. Johanson, current speculation among research scientists is that the "ultimate therapeutic tool may be in the release factor hormone for the pituitary, produced by the hypothalamus.

"Many children who have growth problems may not have a defective pituitary, but the gland may not be getting the stimulus it should. In the case of the pituitary, the hypothalamus, part of the brain, would be the defective organ." Its hormone has much small molecules and would be much easier to produce.

Human growth hormone has been synthesized but not perfected, and is extremely difficult and expensive to produce. Now the solution to human growth problems being near has been diminished greatly as federal budget cuts have dramatically curtailed funding for research in this field.

The Pediatric Endocrine Clinic and Labortory at the University of Virginia Hospital has been funded by federal grants which, according to Dr. Johanson, are "no longer available."

The Charlottesville clinic each year treats 300 to 400 children whose problems relate to growth, development of normal adolescence, thyroid disorders and a number of other related problems.

Human Growth Foundation, a national volunteer organization composed primarily of parents of children with growth problems, has undertaken "Project Grow" in an effort to raise, through private contributions at least $100,000 and "hopefully several million dollars to support basic and clinical research on growth.

We are, therefore, appealing to friends like you to help us with "Project Grow" so that children like ours can be helped. This is a matter of great importance to us. We would appreciate your help.
